Getting it Right on Rights: Simplifying, Harmonizing, and Maximizing the Openness of Rights in Digital Libraries around the World

Large-scale collections like the Digital Public Library of America, Europeana, Trove, and DigitalNZ have enriched the free web by making openly available tens of millions of items from libraries, archives, museums, and cultural heritage sites from their respective countries or continents. This burgeoning public commons is weakened, however, by a lack of common agreement over rights statements on these items, inconsistent international copyright law, and risk aversion among many nonprofit institutions. We will bring

The screenshot shows a web browser window with a white background. A blue-outlined rectangular box is positioned at the top of the page. Below this box, a dropdown menu is open, displaying a list of options. The option 'Never' is highlighted with a blue background. The other options in the menu are 'You're', 'Too cool', 'OR', 'Too careful', 'For a', 'Dropdown', and 'Menu'. The browser's address bar is visible at the top, showing a URL that appears to be 'http://www.example.com/'. The browser's title bar is also visible, showing the text 'Example Browser'.
